

SOQUIJ chooses LIMS, Irosoft's system for statutes and regulations management

The system streamlines the acquisition, updating, and exploitation of data, and simplifies the verification of the data's operational integrity, enabling a more efficient management of SOQUIJ's legislative database and enhancing the company's new legal research environment.

Montréal, Québec, July 9, 2013 – The Société québécoise d'information juridique (SOQUIJ), a company whose mission is to analyze, organize, enrich and publish Quebec law, has chosen the conversion/publishing module of LIMS, Irosoft's legislative content management system, to populate its legal database, which will be accessible through the legal research service on its new portal.

The new solution will consist primarily of:

- a legal database structured to answer various search queries and data publication needs;
- an operations management system linked to legislative content updates.

The project will deliver an operational process and enable the processing of the following collections:

- Revised Statutes and Regulations of Quebec, including prior versions;
- Revised Statutes and Regulations of Canada, including prior versions.

"We wanted to offer our clients the possibility of searching a collection of statutes and regulations, so we were looking for a supplier with advanced expertise and the technologies we needed to implement the solution within a short time frame," explains Mr. Claude Paul-Hus, general manager at SOQUIJ. "Irosoft meets all of our selection criteria," he adds. "Not only will LIMS, our statutes and regulations management solution, enable SOQUIJ to reach its short-term business objectives, it will also let the organization offer its clients a new research environment that is both unique and complete," concludes Mr. Alain Lavoie, president of Irosoft.
